- Because you have inquired about our training you are receiving this email. Marine surveyors use many credentials. Letters, and terms such as “Accredited” “Certified” and “Qualified.” No one organization is in charge of Marine Surveyors. The US Coast Guard does not approve or certify marine surveyors.
- Surveyors may be self-employed, which is generally the case, or some might work for a marine surveyor group. In all cases, the survey report and the inspection are the responsibility of the marine surveyor.
- There are many terms that represent training and certification by private organizations. There is no national license. Surveyors “self” accredit.
- Our courses are recognized methods for entering and continuing certification in business.
- Below are outlines for review of our blended online/home study programs. Exams are included-no extra fee. No experience is required. Prior boating experience strongly advised. For detailed and complete outlines/syllabus, please review Policies and Procedures.
